Dispatch says: of give you the pictures of several representative gentlemen here. I will now hold up a representative of the Charleston Bar, in the person of James L. Petigru, esq. Mr. Petigru is, I believe, a native of this city. He is now about sixty years of age, about five feet ten inches in height, stout, with redundancy of flesh, broad fat face, very broad forehead, but, low, ponderous brow, very small eyes, and deep so; indeed, the eye is so small one can hardly determine the color without close examination, but they shine, nevertheless, like far distant stars. Mr. Petigru is a firstclass lawyer, and an orator unsurpassed in this country. His voice is of the Jack Randelph order; his off-hand speeches abound in wit, and when he chooses to include his hearers with humor, you will have to bind up your sides before you enter the hall. He is exceedingly companionable, full of life and anecdote, always pleasant and good humored, and is the life of social gatherings .-He ordinarily walks the streets alone, slowly and thoughtfully, with his cane under his left arm, and his hands behind him. I heard a good anecdote of Mr. Petigu a few days ago. Some years ago, he was a candidate to some office, and at a public gathering in the country, some one opposed to him in politics fell to abusing him, by calling him all sorts of bad names, such as "d-d liar," "rascal," and perhaps "thief," all of which he bore with perfect good humor. Ae last, the fellow, after exhausting his vocabulary, called him a "dammed Federalist," and no sooner said than he spralled him. After it was all over, some friend said to him, "Pet, why did you permit that man to apply such harsh epithets to you without resenting it, and for calling you a Federalist you knocked him down?" "Why," said he, "you all know, and so did I, that I was no rogue, or liar, or rascal; but I knew, and so did you that I was a Federalist, and I could not stand that." In person, he is unlike anyone now in your midst, but has a face very much like that of the late John M. Pat-A Curious Diverce Case. - A sort of John

Dean case was before the Manchester (Eug.) Divorce Court a few days ago. The petitioner, a young lady named Margaret Lea Bevan, the daughter of Mr. Bevan, a surgeon of some eminence near Liverpool, but now dement, contracted a clandestine union with M'Mahon, the driver of an omnibus in which she was in the habit of riding. It was agreed between the petitioner and the respondent that the latter should obtain a licence of marriage, omiting the name of Lea, the petitioner insisting by way of condition, that the respondent should not claim her as his wife until two years had expired from merit a share of public patronage. as his wife until two years had expired from the time of the marriage. The petitioner now entirely repudiated on the ground that. although she was an essenting party, the marriage was null and void by reason of the fraud and misrepresentation in obtaining the licence. Sir Creeswell Cresswell said that they felt bound to decide that the marthe person to be married. If they were to where there had been birth of children; the husband could turn round, and upon a more misdescrip tion, set aside the marriage, and reduce his wife to the position of his mistress. Public policy as well as the statute justified their decision; the prayer for the dissolution of the marriage would be, therefore, refused. The other judges concurred. Dissolution of marriage refused.

ORIDE. This is a new metallic alloy, extensively used in this country as a substitute for gold. Stor-s have sprung into existence all over the country for the sale of it, and newspapers contain flaming advertisements of a "fall set of jewelry for only one dollar, being the stock of a large manufacturer," (or merchant) "who is obliged to dispose of his stock on account of the panic."

It is a French discovery, and is called, by the French, Gold Oriede. It is manufactured to a large extent in Waterbury, Connecticut, a very close resemblance to gold, in color, density, and fineness of grain; so close that it deceives every one but practical dealers or experts. Its component parts consist of pure copper, 100 parts; zinc, or (preferably) tin, 17 parts; magnesia, 6 parts; sal ammoniac, 3.6 parts; quieklime, 1.8 parts; turtar of commerce, 9 parts.

SEIZURE OF A VESSEL AT NEW YORK .-The schr. Restless, of Great Egg Harbor, N. J., recently obtained a cargo at Mobile for Havana, Her captain, as usual, surrendered his licence and applied to the collector at Mobile for a register. The collector replied that he had ceased to be a United States officer, and that he could not furnish a United States register. The captain en-Spanish coasul at Mobile, and sailed for Ha- to furnish the ding, he sailed for New York, arriving there on Wednesday. On his arrival the schooner was immediately seized by Collector Schell, under the 8th section of the "Act for enrolling and licensing ships, &c.," dated 20th February, 1793. This is the first case of the kind which has arisen at New York since the speession of the Southern States.
